The week kicked off with the ongoing U.S.-China trade war. This has caused some concern that the slowdown of China's economy, which had been powering global growth in recent years, could slow, leading to a collapse in the global economy, while China's slowing industrial production has also created worries about a widening trade deficit. Emerging-market currencies were also under pressure as the U.S. Federal Reserve launched two more interest rate increases last week, while strong dollar supported commodity prices, including oil and gold, which are often seen as safe-haven investments in times of market turmoil. Meanwhile, Brazil's economy is also struggling, with economic growth slumping to a 23-year low in the second quarter. In response, the Brazilian central bank launched several measures to boost the economy, and said it would tax financial activity. Here are some of the key events to watch on Friday: Trade tensions

China's official purchasing manager's index (PMI) for July showed that China's industrial production for July plummeted to 50.1, its lowest level since the end of 2009. The figures show
