cover the costs of hosting this collection?Image caption The US government is cracking down on unauthorised medical marijuana The US government is working to seal the fate of an industry that is expected to become the world's largest within the next five years. A decision on whether to grant licences for the domestic cultivation of medical marijuana will be made by the end of this year, US officials say. It would mean two years of uncertainty for growers, who have submitted more than 5,500 applications. But what is medical marijuana and where does it fit in the federal drug strategy? Cannabis tincture Cannabis is part of the plant family known as cannabis and has a long history of use for medicinal purposes. The debate about medical marijuana in the US started soon after George Washington was sworn in as

US president. In 1792, he wrote to his secretary of state, James Madison, warning that he believed there was a "malign influence" at work in the country "which is calculated to weaken the government of the Union". Two years later, in 1794, he asked for permission to import "laudanum" - a tincture of cannabis - from his friend John Jacob Astor, who was then the richest man in the US. Image caption The company behind the plant called cannabidiol is in talks to raise $100m (£63m) on a stock market flotation The substance was supposed to aid in the treatment of epilepsy. However, it was also used in the 19th Century as an anaesthetic - and in the 1960s as a dissolving agent in the development of the contraceptive pill. The federal government first moved against medical marijuana in 1972, when the federal Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) outlawed the sale of cannabis products in the US. But in the past 35 years, scientific advances

Linguify.S is a free tool that helps simplify translating the language used in the interface of your application. Linguify.S is a Web-based application, which means that it does not require installation on the client PC. You can use it to translate many application functions. For example, you can translate the screen layout of the ERP system by clicking on the right of the file – it appears next to the buttons. You can also change the languages of the application. You can use any of the supported translation languages (available in Linguify.S). If a language function is not available for the language you want to translate, the system opens a translation dialog box and displays the translation. If the translation is not available, it is displayed on the screen in red. Please note that some functions that are not translated by the tool may not be present in the interface of the particular application. Download the application: Screen Layout - allows you to translate the user interface layout. Textbook - allows you to translate texts of information for students of your library. Control Panel - allows you to translate texts of control panels of some applications (an example of an unsupported language is Amharic). Shortcuts - allows you to translate keyboard shortcuts (a key combination can be, for example, F5 or CTRL+F5). The tool is free and is distributed under a GNU license. The main page of the web interface has a link to the source code on GitHub. You can download the source code from there or from Linguify.S site.
