Join today and see all of our videos! Shiho is such a feisty little fuck. She came in at the start of the shoot thinking that she would get a ride from us. She was wrong. Our pimp showed up and said that he paid us a hundred bucks for her and that we could have her for the rest of the shoot. Instead of going and getting a taxi, she just hopped in the car. We almost had to bounce her off of the wheel but we drove on over to the apartment. We told Shiho that she was going to fuck our tight young asses. She took off her top and we all got to enjoy her massive tits. Shiho saw that our asses were hairy and came up with a plan to get us some money. She took all of our money and kept a little for herself. We had to take off our pants and turn into a piggy pie. We switched over to her horniest position and started finger fucking and ass stretching her. Shiho didn't know how to handle a whole dick in her ass and ended up in tears. We took out a dildo and stretched her asshole for her first anal. When we finally got Shiho off our butts we went back and fucked her pretty hard.

Q: Mechanism of Ligand Reactivity in Transition Metal Chemistry What is the cause of the reactivity of $\text{P}=\text{O}$ in P/M/X systems? Why is $\text{P}=\text{O}$ relatively unreactive in P/M/X systems when compared to M/X? More generally, how do transition metals catalyze the formation and decomposition of the $\text{P}=\text{O}$ bond? A: As stated above, P=O compounds can be decomposed to more reactive P=X species by "capturing the oxygen" in transition metal catalysis. In that sense, many P=O bonds are rather stable. An example is -P-O-Ar which decomposes to P-Ar. However, C=P bonds are very reactive towards alkenes in
