Most of the image-editing features in Photoshop work with layers. This is the important thing to remember. If you don't have layers, you're going to have a lot of trouble. A layer is a group of pixels that appear on a separate layer in the Photoshop file. You can manipulate each layer independently. Layers are like paper sheets. One image can be on top of another. Or, as in the case of Photoshop, several images can be on top of one another. There are two types of layers: • Solid Image Layers - These layers add texture and shape to an image. • Mask Layers - These layers can be used to mask out an image. Here is a simple guide to understand how layers work: • Import an image: Select the photo you want to work on and click File > Open. • Adjust the color of an image: Click the triangle next to the photo icon in the upper right corner of the program. • Arrange the layers: Click on the icon

Q: How to execute JS code only when Angular directive gets focus? I have an Angular directive: app.directive('myText', function(){ return { restrict: "A", replace: true, templateUrl: "some/path", controller: function($scope) { ... }, link: function(scope, element, attrs, ctrl) { var input = element.find('input'); input.focus(function() { var caret = input.caret(); var position = input.val().length + caret; input.val(input.val().substring(0, position)); input.caret(position); }); } }; }); This directive is meant to replace the contents of the text field to which it is applied. It does it by setting the input content to a substring and then placing the caret after the replaced text. Now the problem is, that when the text field gets focus for the first time, Angular performs the digest loop in which the scope has its value updated - all right. Now what i want is, that the first focus of the input field triggers Angular to perform the digest loop and after that, the text field gets the input. Any ideas? A: I found a solution. In fact, i have two text fields, a parent and a child. Both of them have my directive. The directive in turn contains the.focus() function. However, the caret was resetting back to the beginning of the text field after the digest loop, while it was needed within the parent text field. So what

Play video content Exclusive TMZ.com 1:36 PM PT -- TMZ Sports has some exclusive video of the alleged brawl... extremely loud and from a different angle than the TMZ footage above. 2:48 PM PT -- Here's the footage from TMZ Sports. A fight broke out on set on the set of a new episode of 'Saturday Night Live' on Tuesday. Multiple sources tell TMZ there was an argument between cast members over Robert Smigel's tenure as the show's head writer. It's not clear what led to the argument... but the fight reportedly ended when one of the cast members threw a stunt-double. There's a distinct possibility the guy who allegedly threw the guy is cast member Fred Armisen. Armisen and his "SNL" cast mate Bill Hader went to the hospital Tuesday to get checked out after the alleged brawl. Watch the news conference below:Q: What is the function of 'que' in this sentence? I am interested in the role of que in this sentence: Si el món dona als seus dones i el últim deixa la vida que són pro-èstes. I understand it as meaning "that which gives life." And I can definitely fill in the gaps with other words (like que 'that' or el 'that'), but I'm curious about the meaning of que and the role it plays. Is it a clause and not really a 'que' as one would normally think? If so, does it fit better in the text after 'que' or in the 'que' itself? A: The translation you give is the best possible. Note that this is a paraphrase of a famous quote from Shakespeare: Had I the supple body and wiry limbs of a young child, I would wish myself a swan, to be loved and cared for by a king, and, to bequeath and leave the world, the lands and lordships I love and am honourably bound to. Note that que is not a clause but a conjunctive adverb, and that ser is an adjective that modifies que. (The sentence without ser would be too complicated, and we often leave out the articles in colloquial speech). It means that the phrase pode ser (can be) followed by the
