AutoCAD is used to create detailed blueprints for construction projects. On October 30, 2017, Autodesk announced AutoCAD for iPad, allowing users to connect to any AutoCAD or AutoCAD LT document from their iPad in a similar way they could connect to AutoCAD or AutoCAD LT documents from their Mac or Windows computer. CAD is the core of the industry's engineering and architectural information. CAD is used in architectural, civil, construction, electro-mechanical, mechanical, naval, mine, pipe, pipe-digging, robotics, structural, surveying, and other industries. that is used to design and create 2D and 3D objects, models, and architectural blueprints. AutoCAD is a 2D/3D tool, with 2D tools available as toolbars or floating windows. In AutoCAD 2017, you can configure the 2D tools as floating or fixed, and you can create unlimited toolbars. You can move, resize, and delete tools from the toolbars as you design a drawing. Creating objects and adding components to an existing drawing is done with the push of a button or the click of a mouse. An object you create in one drawing is automatically added to the drawing's folders, and the original drawing is linked to the object. You can view the contents of an entire folder and create new objects from a single point. Because of the point-and-click interface, AutoCAD is great for beginners. But, with a large and growing number of features, a steep learning curve, and a large number of advanced features, AutoCAD requires some experience. You should be able to look at a drawing, zoom in and out to see details, rotate and translate objects, and draw vectors, polylines, or polyplanes. AutoCAD includes several drawing capabilities that are used by architects and other construction professionals. When you draw with the Line and the Polyline commands, you draw straight, thin lines that meet at specific, predefined points called intersections. You can then extrude, expand, or hollow out the individual lines or the entire polyline. Extrusion is like a 3D pipe-cutting operation. With the Polyline, you can create a drawing that want to know when we connect to the market and do the in app purchase, the purchase done with Google play but do we have the same processes? A: Google Play allows users to purchase apps directly on their mobile phones, using their Google account. These apps must be downloaded from Google's Android Market. If you want to do in-app purchases that are not tied to a Google account (like iTunes, Amazon, etc.), you have to register a free developer account, and upload ca3bfb1094
