The difference between FIFA 20 and FIFA 22 is the addition of Motion Tracking. Motion Tracking data captured from the motions of real-life players is used to authenticate the player's actions on-screen. This is done by comparing this gameplay data to data from real-life movements of the players. For example, during an aerial duel, the ball will make small movements during the flight between the player and the goalkeeper, and these movements will be reflected in the on-screen simulation. While the HyperMotion technology has been in development since FIFA 19, one of the objectives of the team behind FIFA 22 was to raise the bar even higher for authenticity in EA Sports' high-end football experience. "FIFA is all about authenticity, and we've always been on the forefront of working with real-life players," said Alec Bryson, Creative Director at EA DICE. "We're also an established powerhouse in this category, because we've been working with on-field players for more than 20 years, and that's why our fans trust FIFA to deliver exceptional sports simulations." We're very happy to be able to share some details about FIFA 22. While we won't give away everything before release, here are some of the features that we can share. Superstar Player Contracts FIFA 22 introduces celebrity player contracts, which will be revealed in the FIFA 22 Season Pass as well as the upcoming PLAYERUNKNOWN'S BATTLEGROUNDS closed beta. The game will include around 4,500 unique celebrity contracts, with 5,000 players from around the world, available to be picked up by up to 16 clubs. The contracts will feature an arsenal of unique abilities, including use of EA SPORTS Player Impact Engine technology. These bonuses will be randomized so that each contract will offer a unique experience for each club. Expect stars like Lionel Messi, Cristiano Ronaldo, Neymar and Kylian Mbappé to find new heights with their current club, while others will rise to be stars at new clubs. "The FIFA 22 contract system takes everything we've learned from the past 14 years and implements it in a different way. It includes the opportunity to get a real superstar player, so we can show off our capabilities at creating sports as a complete experience. We have a very experienced and talented team in motion capture, player development and FIFA is a brand of video games, developed by Electronic Arts and published worldwide since 1993. It's the world's most popular sports game and the clear favorite among football lovers. FIFA gameplay With a new licence in every year, Electronic Arts is able to consistently deliver new features and unique gameplay concepts. Those who played FIFA before will know what to expect from a new FIFA season, and those who join the FIFA family for the first time will be surprised by the quality. FIFA gameplay is on par with the NFL (NFL Football), NBA (NBA Basketball), and NHL (NHL Hockey) as the world's leading sports game franchises. A footballers' dream: The physical simulation layer The process of creating a new series of videogames remains a challenge for the developer. The procedure includes a trial and error procedure that involves an enormous amount of variables that have to be juggled by the team. Many trials and errors later, a game is finally ready to be shown to the public. Among those variables, and without being too technical, the developer tries to be as realistic as possible, understanding that gamers have a high regard for visual aspects. With FIFA 22, Electronic Arts decided to focus on one of the core game mechanics, more precisely the physical simulation layer. The gameplay layer that follows the simulation layer is the physics simulation and the updated squad management interface. If you're a true FIFA fan, you should know that you may be familiar with The Best FIFA Awards. In order to improve the game, new players are introduced with the following categories:...
