'Perseverance: Part 1 - a real three-part novel, with three long stories to enjoy together or on their own. Subscribe to web blog ' The story is about women's revolution, whose aim is to introduce a new geopolitical system on an international scale. The international illegal trade of women from a poor to a wealthy country began to be detected. The female revolution created a national war group. It is an armed gang that fights against the police, the military, the government and everyone who was involved in abusing of female freedom. The national war group receives a male agent, who is forced to undertake an important mission. In order to realize this mission, the female revolution needs the help of a seductress from the south. The seductress is willing to participate in a supernatural experiment in the north. In the end, the female revolution needs a male agent. He meets a strange woman who voluntarily takes part in a mysterious experiment but can't recall what was done to her. Then a female agent with crimson lips who needs to 'take care of a situation'. All is familiar and the way we like it. "Play as a man, love a girl, save the world!" A dystopian version of our society. Follow the main hero's story through 7 chapters. This game is heavily inspired by the visual novel "Never Let Me Go" from Neil Gaiman and Ruth Ware. This game is not about a love story, but rather about a heartless society that tries to destroy the main characters and their love. It also tells you, that if you forget something, it might be better not to remember. My take on the story of Alisa Despin, an activist and a participant of the World's Fair. Her boyfriend Ivan is a follower of deposed dictator Lysenko and will eventually be sent to a labour camp, a fate that Alisa is determined to save him from. Living With Goblins is a game of adventure, puzzles and exploration. You are a new arrival at the village of Nottingham. All of a sudden there are footsteps on the roof, ominous creaking, and small mammals leave tracks in the snow. How did a goblin invasion start? What do they want? With a variety of weapons to discover, a full, challenging, map and mysterious other-worldly themes, Living With Goblins lets you explore the snowy wilderness in a whole new light. You start the game in the center of the map which is a nice idea, and to enter the world you have to load a save, which seems a bit tedious to me. There's the map and the journal, and in the journal you can read the names of the people who died in the last place you were in. In case you get lost, you can talk to the girl who is tending the post-mistress, so you can always start from where you last left off. There is a crafting system, and in the crafting screen you have to select what material you want, and how much you want to do (effectively, how many steps of that material you want to make). There's some materials that are only found in some places, some that are only in dungeons, some that you can only make one of at a time. There's also some consumable items, which are like in Harvest Moon and The Castles of Dr. John, you can spend them to get random effects. There's a lot of consumable items. All of them are used to either help you progress (they are used to make recipes for your weapon, or for shields and the like), or they are things like more life (and magic!), or they allow you to start the next map in a different location. Like in the The Castles of Dr. John, you can carry 40 things with you. But unlike that game, the places you can carry items to are randomly generated. When you arrive at an area, you can talk to the person who lives there, and this can trigger options in the area. It's still basic fetch quest stuff, but with some interesting choices. So, for example, you can let them come with you, or not. You can negotiate a deal with them to buy things, or let them stay and get them for you later, or beat them up. There are also treasure chests, which are where items you've crafted can drop. And when you go in a dungeon
