A: According to the documentation you have a maximum of 512 characters so no, you cannot use a VARCHAR field. Q: How to set a custom object's NSDictionary value inNSUserDefaults in Swift? I have a custom object that stores some NSDictionary values. I would like to store this object inNSUserDefaults when an item is selected from a tableView, however I cannot seem to get it to work. I have tried to populate the dictionary with key:value pairs on save, however, this does not work for me. The error I receive is  Terminating app due to uncaught exception 'NSInvalidArgumentException', reason: 'Attempt to insert non-property list object of class 'MarketData'.' The code that I use to populate the NSDictionary is this: @objc public var marketData: NSDictionary = [:] // other code to set the values in the dictionary let defaults = NSUserDefaults.standardUserDefaults() defaults setObject(marketData, forKey: "MarketData") What is the proper way to set the dictionary value 0cc13bf012
