I am trying to remove all html tags, but I am having trouble removing the white space so that it becomes white space. Here is my code: `$_ =~ s{[|\s>(.?*)} {$1}sx;` This does remove all of the tags, but it also removes new lines. I don't want to replace newlines with white

space. I do not want this: Hello, to become Hello, I would like it to become, Hello, I am not sure if this is possible with regex, because I have never used it. But does this make sense? EDIT: $ _ = ~ s{}[\s\|]+>(.?)} {$1}sx; I tried using [\s\|]+ but it does not work at all. EDIT 2: So I tried the suggestions below: $ _ = ~ s{ } {$1}sx; The resulting HTML code does not change. A: Your regex is almost correct, but you need to replace. (any character) with [\s\|]. You can use $1 in the replacement part. And some additional info about escaping white space: You can also escape c9d1549cdd
