Nitric oxide inhibits the growth of Ehrlich ascites tumor cells in vivo. In this study we evaluated the effect of NO donor drugs on Ehrlich ascites tumor cell (EATC) growth in vivo. Mice were injected i.p. with EATC and i.p. injected with sodium nitroprusside or diethylenetriamine NONOate (DET) for a period of 5 days. Our results showed that, i.p. injection with DETA NONOate was the most efficient treatment to inhibit the growth of EATC. DETA NONOate inhibited the growth of the tumor cells and also stimulated the degradation of iNOS protein in EATC. Tumor volume was measured 48 hours after treatment. The final outcome was that DETA NONOate inhibited the growth of EATC in mice, and the iNOS stimulation was probably involved in this effect.Q: Error in AsParallel processing from data frame I have a data frame with a series of latitude and longitudes.
