As I stated in my comment there are many factors that can result in an error. The best way to go about it is to shut down the software, open up the case, unplug the RAM modules and try a reboot. You can also try moving the RAM modules to test if that is the only thing. Good luck! P2P Posting Protocol.

Sonicshack Design Studio Full VersionTranscatheter aortic valve implantation with transesophageal echocardiography guidance: a new generation for a classic method.
Transesophageal echocardiography has been widely used in interventional cardiology. Its introduction in transcatheter aortic valve implantation increased the safety of the procedure and reduced the complication rates. However, intraprocedural image acquisition is difficult, mainly because of the depth of the esophagus and the continuous movement of the probe. The purpose of this study was to develop a new type of probe for transesophageal echocardiography guidance of transcatheter aortic valve implantation. In 5 patients, three different ultrasound transducers were mounted on the tip of a modified adult esophageal probe, allowing position verification as well as 3-dimensional imaging of the valvular anatomy, to guide the procedure. This new device enabled precise imaging within the prosthesis and the aortic root, even in the presence of prosthesis components such as rings. The method proved to be safe and accurate, provided sufficient operator experience, and all patients were eventually treated without complications. Transesophageal echocardiography guidance might become a new standard method for transcatheter aortic valve implantation.

Q: Using the find() method with Arrays in Java I am new to Java and I am trying to make a program to ask for user input for an array's size. However, my problem is not getting the correct value to enter for size but only keeps on asking for input until the program is closed. This is the code:

import java.util.*; public class MakeBread { public static void main(String[] args) { Scanner input = new Scanner(System.in); int size; System.out.print("Enter the number of breads:"); size = input.nextInt(); System.out.println("Enter breads:");
