(CNN) Federal prosecutors will tell a New York jury that former Trump fixer Michael Cohen stole tens of thousands of dollars from a California nail salon in what is poised to be the "biggest" fraud case of the year, according to a source familiar with the case. The source said Thursday that prosecutors will call at least five witnesses to the stand, all but one of which would be a criminal defendant. The one exception is IRS official Holly Paz, who would testify that Cohen embezzled the money from the nail salon and used it to pay for things such as a $750,000 personal payment to porn star Stormy Daniels. It is unclear whether prosecutors will make a case against Cohen, who was charged last September with eight crimes including tax evasion and bank fraud. Prosecutors said Cohen lied to the IRS about his finances and shell companies he used to pay Daniels and other women, and that he worked in concert with President Donald Trump and others to lie about the Trump Tower Moscow project. Prosecutors are expected to argue that the payments were designed to silence women who might otherwise threaten Trump's campaign for the White House in 2016.
