Top 10 Villains of Fiction and Film The villain is the most important character in fiction because he is usually the most proactive character in a story and is often the one who causes the problem the characters are trying to solve. The villain also usually has the most conflict in the story because he is the most problematic character in the story. In the stories that I read, for example, the villain tends to be a hero. He starts off as the hero, and he saves the story, and then he becomes the villain and causes problems b7e8fdf5c8
