Faced with multiple accusations of sexual assault, The Atlantic published an article Tuesday claiming that the recently ousted Senator Al Franken admitted to inappropriately touching women during a 2006 USO tour to entertain troops in the Middle East. The article says Franken, now a Democratic Senator representing Minnesota, took his hand up the back of a sleeping Minnesota-native woman (who agreed to her identity being kept anonymous) during the tour, which was meant to highlight “the power of free expression and democracy overseas.” “After they had enjoyed a few drinks together, Franken placed a hand on her thigh, she said, and tried to kiss her,” the article says. Al Franken’s first accuser—a woman who says he groped her while they both served in the Air Force—has demanded that Franken resign from his seat. And Minnesota’s governor has said Franken must resign. An African-American woman who sat next to Franken during the tour says she witnessed the groping and was incensed by it. She has come forward to accuse Franken of the inappropriate behavior. A second woman, a former Democratic staffer who worked with Franken, also accuses him of groping her. In a Facebook post Tuesday morning, Jane Fonda said she had proof that Franken had touched her in a “very inappropriate way” at a 2006 event. The woman whose photo appeared on the cover of

The Democratic Party has called for Franken's resignation as well. "Any form of sexual harassment is completely unacceptable and must not be tolerated," said Senator Kirsten Gillibrand, who represents New York. In a letter that was released Tuesday, Franken's office said he was resigning from his USO role. "I certainly don't remember the rehearsal for the skit in the same way, but I send the most sincerely apologetic words to the woman involved," he wrote in the letter. The article on his history of the USO tour claims Franken was "acc
