Pathologic 2 is a story-driven survival horror game, designed to offer a fresh challenge to the players. The survival mechanics introduce a new system of holding your breath, allowing you to live with much less oxygen, but still keep all the other features of the game. Beyond this, after a certain point in the game, you may have to play the game cooperatively with a friend to survive. As of now, the game is available to download on Steam. Game Features: • Explore the Dark Universe Play for a day as Dr. Daniil Dankovsky, the leader of the op team. And for the first time in the series, you can explore the dark universe yourself as much as you want. You will have to find answers and solve puzzles which will reveal what has happened and why. • Pursue Your Dreams As soon as you start the game, you will have a chance to participate in the event dubbed 'The Bachelor'. This is the final challenge of survival, and it will be your last chance to save the town. If you fail in this event, the Town will be toast. • A Mysterious Scenario The game is entirely based on the fragmented memory of the protagonist, which means the plot will keep shifting every time you restart it. Some of the themes and hints will remain the same, some will change, leaving the final ending to the player's imagination. What's new in YoloMic:

In this final weekend before we head to Kansas City this weekend, we drive through Oklahoma and Texas to reach the Mississippi River in Chadron State Park. We meet up with a friendly prospector and navigate a new and divided region (all from the game). Eat Paint Game Ashley and I got into a nice disagreement at the church bazaar this morning. Ashley thought a sealed photo of us on a table would draw people to it, and it did. Ashley looked at my arm and said, "I see you got 'eat paint'!" The bazaar was a fundraiser for our church. The theme was "Thank You, Lord" and lots of paintings by local artists hung on the walls in a most unteacherly way. Ash was right. It should have been something related to the theme, like "Eat Paint" or "Thank You God" in pursuit of "Thank you, Lord." I vote for just handing me a bucket of paint and going to town. Very soon after Ashley noticed I had received "eat paint," Ashley pointed at a painting of Jesus on the ceiling and called me Jesus. I left the bazaar because Ash was getting all violent. Everyone else was trying to keep her from doing something bad, so I got out of there. Potholer State Park in Chadron, Nebraska (Photo by Robert Krizan) Game Ends We've now been traveling for 28 hours. We're in the southern plains. Ash seems to be getting tired (she slept for the first half of Dallas, and after Houston we only went to bed twice, all the rest of the day in Wichita). Maybe it's mid-March and our bodies are still adjusting to March weather. It's very windy, which has caused troubles for our email and telephone. But we are going to KC for the night. We've made two substantial breaks since leaving Denver. We started our pizza-fever streak on Chili's: $40 and 12 slices, each, for the two of us. It was glorious. We traveled to Glenwood for a few decent nights' rest, then decided to continue north after spending Sunday in Denver. That night in Glenwood we had planned to have pizza, but it seemed like a waste of money to travel for 16
