It costs around $15 a year. ## Mixing and Matching Images Each image has its own individual purpose and can be used in a variety of ways. While you can always rely on people's sense of color, the in-camera flash can be a very useful tool for your camera, even when you're not using it to light the image. The flash is a crude sensor that takes a single sample of each color at the time of exposure. Because it takes only a single sample, no matter how much light your subject has, it exposes the scene as if the camera has moved closer or farther away from your subject. The Flash No Exposure setting does just that. On the Mode dial, rotate the ring to the left, and you select that setting. Try this: • Press the shutter button halfway and hold it down. Then, rotate the Mode dial to the left to find the Flash No Exposure setting and press the Shutter button all the way down. Don't miss the dramatic drop in flash exposure and the darker skies. Flash used to be an expensive extra that many people didn't have. Today, most cameras have enough power to handle the fast speed that flash photography requires. In addition, fast-acting wireless flashes are now almost as easy to use as using a smartphone. You can even use a sophisticated iPhone app to control your flash. If you have one, you can buy a separate flash trigger that is easy to use and make the image look good. When you use flash, you need to position it just right so that the light falls on

Q: Why do you think the United States is the most powerful economy in the world today? Why do you think the United States is the most powerful economy in the world today? A: The two top inputs to power are resources and labor. Consider these two maps: US production capabilities (source: wikipedia) US consumption capabilities (source: wikipedia) The US is significant economically in part due to its population size. That is, its large population is critical to its ability to exploit natural resources and combine them with labor in the production process. Its second is its large productive workforce. There is no doubt that China has the second largest population, but the populations of many other countries have similar or larger sizes (e.g. India, Brazil, Russia, etc.). The US, however, also has large productive labor forces (e.g. Canada, Mexico, and several Caribbean nations) that can compete in the production process. A: When you say "the most powerful economy," you seem to imply there is some particular weighting you would like to give each country. The term "power" carries with it a connotation of "dominance" or "strength". When we say "the most powerful economy," we are referring to a gross measure of economic power. China, for example, is probably the most powerful economy in the world due to the sheer size of their population - both in terms of people and money. It would likely also be the most powerful economy in terms of competitiveness. But, to say that China is the most powerful economy in the world is somewhat misleading because we would want to also ask ourselves, "why are we using the term 'most powerful'?" If we are trying to measure a country's economic influence, then the question becomes, "In what way does the U.S. dominate the world's economy?" The answer is that the U.S. is the most powerful in two very different ways. First, it would seem that the U.S. is in control of the world's monetary system. In the global currency exchange rate, the dollar is still king, and the U.S. has the reserve currency. Second, the U.S. spends more of its GDP than any other country on defense, thereby providing benefits on both sides of the balance of power. In terms of monetary policy, the U.S

The Dodge & Burn tools blur an image, removing or brightening selected parts of the image. The Emboss tool creates an image that has a "3D" or "lenticular" look. The Gradient tool creates a colored gradient that can be used to paint over an image or any highlighted area. The Healing Brush uses the Type tool (or the Pen tool) to correct objects that are unevenly blended. The Hue and Saturation tools allow you to adjust the color of pixels in an image and how bright they are. The Levels tool helps you adjust the brightness and contrast of an image. The Histogram represents an image's pixels. The dark portions represent the darker areas of the image, and the lighter areas represent the brighter areas of the image. The Lasso tool allows you to draw a selection around the edge of an area (or the whole image). The selection remains visible, which is useful for replacing areas of an image with areas of another image. The Pen tool allows you to manually create lines or shapes. The Tool Options palette allows you to change or adjust the color, width and location of the tool's handle. The Move tool allows you to manually move an image or any tool on the canvas. The Paint Bucket allows you to copy and paste pixels from one area of the image to another. The Paint Bucket contains a variety of options. For example, you can use the Magic Wand tool (or the Auto Tool) to select pixels that meet certain criteria. Then you can use the Bucket Fill tool to copy and paste the pixels. The Paint Bucket has six options: Invert Wand Edge Reflection Lighten/Darken Soften/Harden The Paint Bucket allows you to manipulate white areas of an image. The Pen tool allows you to manually draw. The Tool Options palette allows you to adjust the handle's position and thickness. The Rectangular Marquee tool allows you to select a portion of a picture, usually a rectangular shape. The Rotate tool allows you to rotate an image, along with any tools you've selected with the Lasso tool. The Sharpen tool can be used to sharpen an image, but you can also sharpen a selection of pixels. The Smudge tool is used to soften and blur pixels. The Spikes and Trenches tool can be used to create a textured effect. The Text
