revision id: 222328. The response of an individual adult to a social influence proposal is a function of both the effectiveness and the novelty of the effects . In the following section, we present the most important features of the new version. This function takes any SAS data set containing a new profile data point as input. . For each profile data point, the program generates a corresponding data file containing the data for the investigation period. Utilization of pectin, a natural polymer, in depolarized liquid crystal and nematic liquid crystal formulations. The effect of pectin on the phase behavior of a cubic and a quasi-lamellar liquid crystal (LC) has been investigated. By using a small amount of pectin in the LC formulations, the compositions of both systems show a phase transition to a biaxial nematic phase. Since both thermotropic and dynamic properties of the LC systems were affected by the addition of pectin, the effect of the addition of pectin as a function of concentration was also measured. It was found that the addition of pectin induces changes in the systems depending on the degree of pectin: polyanions and polycations affect the thermotropic and the elastic properties of the cubic and the quasi-lamellar LCs, respectively. In addition, the elastic properties of the LC systems were quantitatively determined by the Brillouin scattering technique. List of mayors of the City of London This is a list of the mayors of
