Gas spring calculator for gas turbine technology The Gas Spring Calculation Software is a digital calculator for acoustic modeling of gas turbine technology. It is used to calculate the spring of a gas turbine engine or gas compressor (primarily), or to calculate the spring of a gas turbine engine (related), or to calculate the spring of gas-diesel engines. The calculator is configured to calculate the spring of a gas turbine engine or gas compressor, or a gas diesel engine spring. The software product is not intended for use by professionals or experts in the field of mechanical design, but is intended only for students and amateurs who want to learn how to design and calculate gas turbine springs. The calculator does not include a gas engine simulator, which can be downloaded from the NALS website and used to build your own gas springs. It uses only calculations made on the basis of the original data. The calculator is based on the FEP (Fuel Piping Equipment Programming) software, which can be downloaded from the NALS website. The FEP Gas Spring Calculation Software is intended for use in an engineering college. To use the calculator, you must enter the following information into the program: - engine model - gas velocity (kgf/cm<sup>2</sup> per second) - hole diameter (mm) - gas pressure (kgf/cm<sup>2</sup>) - spring size (mm) - spring rate (l<sup>3</sup>/N/m)
