As they did with their first report, In July 2014 the Dell SecureWorks CTU reported another survey on the black markets for hacking services. Their second study focused on the price and demand for hacking services and included a number of interesting findings. Among them we could list the duration of the service, the best antivirus software and the use of proxies for anonymization. Here is the summary of the study : As cyber attacks become more frequent and persistent and attack traffic continues to rise, the range of attacks is also expanding. While it used to be a highly specialized and well-known niche, hackers today have access to specialized tools that can quickly take down a wide variety of targets. The Internet is not just a place to visit, it's a network of computers that relies on one another for the existence of all of the websites, software and users that make it what it is today. As such, each network node needs to work in concert with the others in order to prevent disruptions in service and maintain its own security. This constant interaction of computers creates a number of weak spots that hackers exploit to access, copy and manipulate data, potentially leading to unauthorized access to sensitive information. Hackers are not just looking for users to steal login credentials, but for access to servers, routers and other sensitive parts of the infrastructure that perform the tasks on which a given network depends. can you help me to download a file from this link? <https://www.lifevartu.com/file/3f8fb905-edba-4e9b-aa55-e0e6165e4737.docx> an account is needed and i need te copy the file i need and upload. i can pay, but it's just an account which i think no admins and no hackers will bother with.
