No need to do any of the complicated steps. It is a simple approach to hide the presence of an existing rootkit and provide an ongoing cover to its functions on the targeted system. This tool does not interfere with the running of any program on the affected computer. That makes it suitable to run as an example program. All functions of the rootkit are accessible for modification. Note that the elements of the required objects can be adjusted using the settings tree. Change the location of all file formats of the registry in the configuration. The simplest variant of modding can be used. All personal data are protected using the rootkit modules. Change the settings of the covert service and the generated data. All data protection is proven using the test mode. In addition to the original rootkit, you can also modify the commands of the backdoor. The additional options can be set depending on the user's needs. This makes it easy to use the rootkit on a large number of computers. The rootkit can easily be expanded with new files. The original file can be used as a template for new versions. Version 1.06 has revised the organization of the functions. This simplifies the way of using the tools.
