N1 (Dalam File ikan Inggris juga Kumpulan soal lomba cerdas cermat pengetahuan umum sma.zip)(CNN) Lawmakers on Capitol Hill are gearing up for what could be the biggest overhaul of the US tax code in decades. But with negotiations on the "fiscal cliff" remaining uncertain, there will be little time to consider any controversial proposals in the closing days of the current Congress. That could leave a major tax reform bill on the table for the next Congress, when lawmakers return after the holidays. Although overhauling the tax code is not high on the agenda right now, it is a critical task for lawmakers to accomplish before this year's Super Bowl. "The timing for [tax reform] is just absolutely perfect," said Rep. Kevin Brady, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee. "We can't sit on our hands." The fiscal cliff could be avoided, but only if Congress and the Obama administration can reach an agreement to replace the expiring Bush tax cuts -- which expired at the end of 2012 -- with higher tax rates and additional revenue. So far, the two parties remain far apart on how to solve the fiscal cliff, but there is real momentum to find a solution. The House and Senate began hammering out a deal on the fiscal cliff last week, and President Barack Obama sent out a special envoy last Friday to work out a compromise. In Washington, people wait for the next shoe to drop. One House member said Tuesday that a deal could come as soon as next week. But a senior Senate source says a deal will be "a long way off." These are the top three problems lawmakers are facing right now. 1. A balanced budget agreement A part of the fiscal cliff package will be the so-called "fiscal cliff" -- a set of tax increases and spending cuts scheduled to go into effect on January 1, 2013. If a deal is not reached on the cliff, lawmakers say there is a possibility the US could default on its loans, causing a $600 billion increase in the federal debt. The US has enough money to keep paying its bills for the time being, but economists say the impact would be devastating on the economy. "The only thing worse than our near-term fiscal problems would be having them with a debt limit at the beginning of next year," said Rep. Chris Van Hollen, chairman of the House Budget Committee. Republicans want to cut off any new borrowing, while Democrats say they want to increase the nation's borrowing limit -- which must be raised by August 2. A deal could be close, but it is far from final. 5ec8ef588b
