Thus, even within the framework of "classical" structural analysis, one cannot always rely on the "primordiality" or "secondaryity" of an object in a system.

One can only state the presence of structure, not its determinacy. And this means that it is necessary to recognize the presence of a "hidden" law in the structure, which manifests itself as an "objective" regulator, but manifests itself in the form of a "subjective" condition.
