Lactating rats: effects of N-methyl-D,L-aspartate on milk composition. High doses of N-methyl-D,L-aspartate (NMA) given intravenously to lactating rats on days 9 and 10 postpartum decreased milk fat and protein contents by 50% to 60%. Milk total lipid and fatty acid concentrations were also decreased, the magnitude of the decrease being dependent upon the dose and the particular fatty acid. Plasma and milk NMA levels were higher in lactating rats given NMA than in controls. The decrease in milk content is similar to that observed following hypothalamic knife cuts which simulate the stress of nursing./*=====
